

4-H Teaches Life Skills

In order to help youth to gain skills that will enable them to become self-directing, contributing, and productive members of society, it is essential that they possess skills for successful living. These skills enable 4-H'ers to become better prepared to work with others; manage resources; make decisions and solve problems; acquire, analyze and use information; communicate and relate to others, and have an understanding of self. Therefore, it becomes imperative for 4-H programming to focus on life skills. The six basic life skills emphasized through Virginia 4-H programming are:
